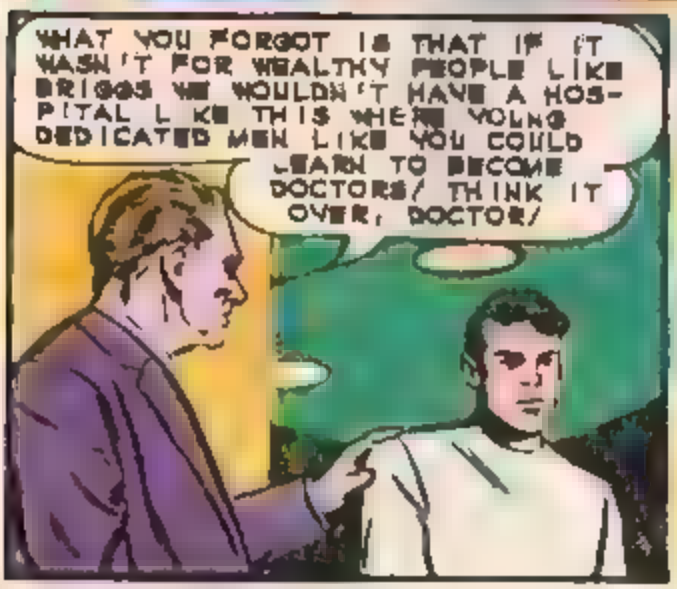
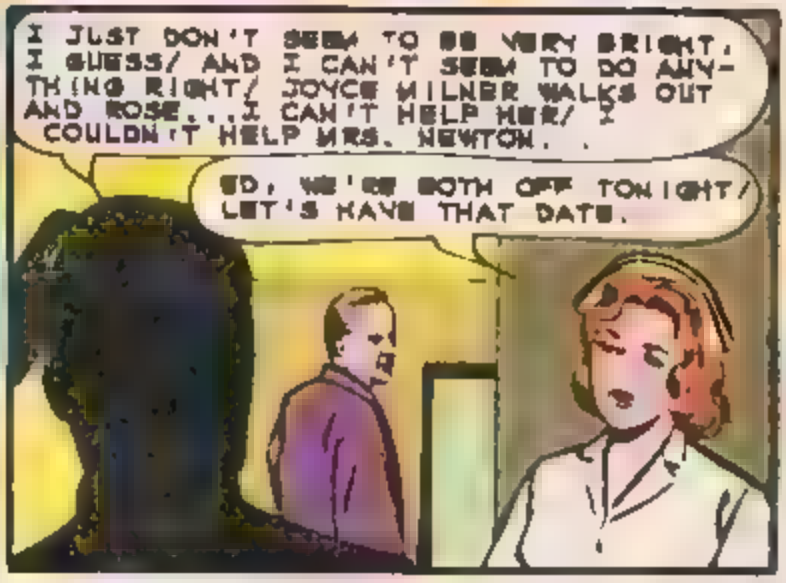
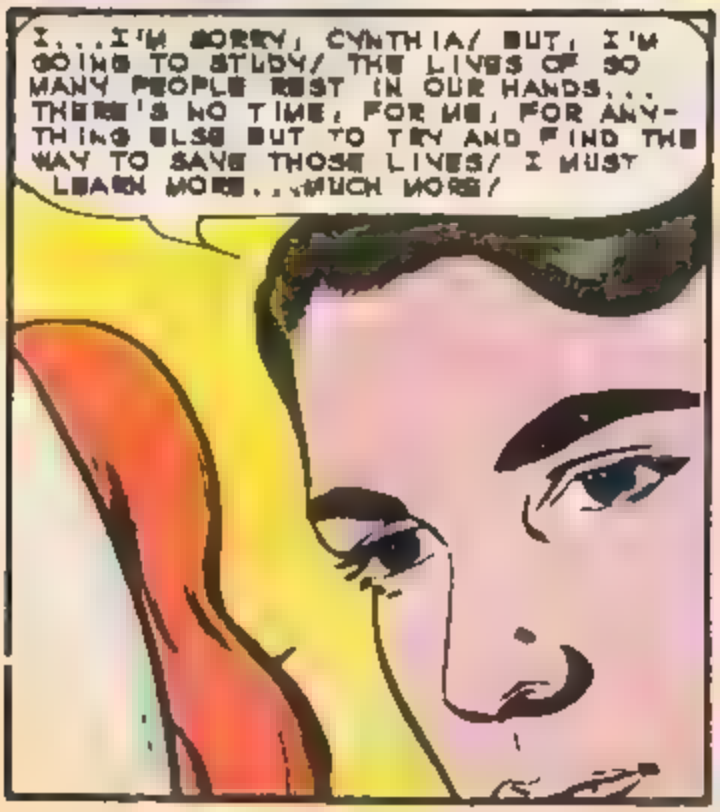
DR. BENSON, I HAD TO DO A GOOD DEAL OF SOFT-SOAPING AND TALKING TO ERASE THE DAMAGE YOU DID WITH MR. BRIGGS/ I TOLD YOU HE WAS A BENE-FACTOR/
I'M SORRY, SIR, BUT I'M A DOCTOR NOT A POLITICIAN/



WHAT YOU FORGOT IS THAT IF IT WASN'T FOR WEALTHY PEOPLE LIKE BRIGGS WE WOULDN'T HAVE A HOSPITAL LIKE THIS WHERE YOUNG DEDICATED MEN LIKE YOU COULD LEARN TO BECOME DOCTORS/ THINK IT OVER, DOCTOR/



I JUST DON'T SEEM TO BE VERY BRIGHT, I GUESS/ AND I CAN'T SEEM TO DO ANYTHING RIGHT/ JOYCE MILNER WALKS OUT AND ROSE...I CAN'T HELP HER/ I COULDN'T HELP MRS. NEWTON.
ED, WE'RE BOTH OFF TONIGHT/ LET'S HAVE THAT DATE.



I...I'M SORRY, CYNTHIA/ BUT, I'M GOING TO STUDY/ THE LIVES OF SO MANY PEOPLE REST IN OUR HANDS... THERE'S NO TIME, FOR ME, FOR ANYTHING ELSE BUT TO TRY AND FIND THE WAY TO SAVE THOSE LIVES/ I MUST LEARN MORE...MUCH MORE/

SANS

The legend on the door was in gold lettering and it read as follows: Dr. John Johnson, Medical Director. But after the first day nobody ever really saw that legend on the door which opened into the large office on the tenth floor of Mercy General Hospital. Because Dr. John Johnson announced his philosophy at the first staff meeting on Monday in the lecture hall on the third floor.

"That door will always be open to you. I don't care what your problem is. Whether it concerns a patient or yourself. If you see me with somebody at my desk just be patient. I am here to serve all of you in the broadest sense of the word."

And they all soon learned that Dr. John Johnson meant exactly what he had said. It made no difference if you were a nurse's aid or the country's leading heart specialist — he felt every human being was an individual and entitled to the fullest measure of confidence and respect. And on this particular Wednesday afternoon Mrs. Helen Disbrow, head nurse in charge of the eighth floor was in his office.

"I was at the meeting of the Board of Education," she began. "They had a full discussion of the entire plan which Superintendent Martin Leobild feels should put into operation with a selected group of high school students. On the surface the objective and the operation of the plan seems good and reasonable to me.

"If a girl decides she wants nursing as a career she should do it with her eyes wide open. In order to be a nurse you have to study hard, be willing to work hard, and take some good hard knocks. If a girl has the wrong concept of nursing as a career she is headed for trouble. My own niece has a romantic idea of what it means to be a nurse. She tells me if she studies nursing she knows she will be meeting a wonderful young M.D. and marry him. I have tried my best to point out that most nurses do not marry doctors. On our own staff I explained to her that one nurse is married to an auto mechanic, one is married to a shoe salesman, one is married to an insurance agent, one is married to a policeman, and one is married to a teacher.

"Superintendent Martin Leobild gave me an outline of the plan which is on your desk. The high school counselor will interview the girls in their sophomore year. The first selected group in the Taft High School which is but three blocks away from our hospital will consist of not more than twenty girls. During their sophomore year they will study, as required of all students, the standard course in First Aid.

"But in their junior year this selected group will take a special course in home nursing. In their senior year they will have another special lecture course given by invited nurses and doctohs. Their programs will be so arranged that they have the last two school periods free each day. They will be required to come here and act as sort of auxiliary aids. We thought up a variety of names for them. Dr. Walter Henderson suggested we called them SANS. S the first letter, for Student; A for Auxiliary; N for Nurse; and S again for Service.

"So we really call them Student Auxiliary Nurses Service. They will wear blue arm bands with the name SANS on it. And each will be supplied with a white uniform and white shoes. They will be permitted to eat in the Hospital Cafeteria. Both Dr. Henderson and myself will do our best to guide and orientate them here. We will work assignment sheets for each student. Actually the goal would be to assign each SANS to a nurse but this is not at present possible because of the rotating time schedule we have in effect at this hospital."

"Sounds like a good idea," admitted Dr. John Johnson. "Notify me when you will have the first group of SANS here. We can fix up the old storeroom as a sort of recreation room for the girls. I have some chairs and tables and two radios in the room to the side of the cafeteria. We will move those items into our SANS receation room."

It was a month later that the first group of twenty SANS were all assembled in the lecture hall on the third floor to hear a short welcoming address delivered by Dr. Walter Henderson who then concluded as follows:

"Nursing is a dedicated profession. You may wish to be a nurse and yet not be best qualified for a variety of reasons, running anywhere from poor health to a lack of emotional controls. In one respect you are a fortunate group. You will be able to sort of get a comprehensive view of the life and work of a nurse. But I must make one thing very clear to you. You must follow orders and never deviate from them. Because what you can do and what you can't do is fixed by law. You are not an R.N. or a doctor."

Minnie Danoof, one of the SANS was assigned to Nurse Edna Persons who showed her what to do.

"See that wagon over there? It has magazines and books. We call it the traveling library. You go into each room and, always with a big smile on your face, show the patients in the room the various publications. Tell them they can have them for reading and leave the items there. Our Women's Auxiliary supplies the library items."

Kathryne Butler, another one of the SANS, was assigned to Nurse Leila Scoville who showed her what to do. They went into an empty room.

"You see the pitcher and glass on that tray. Your task is to see that the pitcher is always filled with cool water and that there is always a clean glass next to the pitcher. One simple way to do this is to use a serving cart. I will show you where the pitchers are filled with water. You fill up twenty of them and simply substitute a filled pitcher for either an empty one or a half filled one. At one time we filled the pitchers in the room. This seems a better technique and safer for a variety of reasons."

Teresa Diori, another one of the SANS, was assigned to Nurse Helen Salron who took her to a room to show her what to do. Young Teresa Diori took one look at the young patient in the bed and recognized him at once.

"Jimmy Felt! What are you doing here? I thought you left our school and took a job."

And before the sixteen-year-old boy could answer, the young SANS took a quick glance at the card which was at the head of his bed.

"You broke your right leg," she continued. "How? And why didn't you call me and tell me?"

"I was ashamed," he finally replied" "pleade with my parents to keep it a secret. I should be out in two weeks. The teachers are sending me my homework. But I will tell you what happened. I was in my bedroom about to go to bed. Instead of taking off my shoes I just kicked them off my feet. I fell and broke my leg. That's all to it. Except every day I wonder how stupid I am and how could I ever be the dumb?"

"You are not dumb," reassured Teresa Diori." "All you ever needed was help with your French. Want me to help you now?"

"Sure," replied the young patient as he took his french book off the table.

"Can I help him for half an hour?" she asked of nurse Helen Calron.

"Of course you can, an excellent idea," was the reply. "And this sort of gives me an idea. Something we overlooked."

So twenty minutes later nurse Helen Calron was speaking of Dr. John Johnson in his office and telling him of what had just happened.

"Some of the SANS can act as tutors in the children's ward. The schools send the assignments and this will keep the children busy. And you know how children can worry when they think they might fall in school."

"A very good idea," smiled Dr. Johnson. "I will see it is put into effect as soon as possible."

It was a week later that Dr. John Johnson was making the rounds on the different floors. He stopped outside of room 625 and the door was half opened as required by regulations whenever there was either a visitor or aide in the room. He could see the young SANS at the bedside of the young patient.

"I never knew how wonderful you really were," sighed Jimmy Felt. "Maybe it was worth while breaking a leg to find all this out. I want you to tell me right now you will go to the Prom with me."

"I will," was the reply. "Provided you learn those irregular verbs on page 126. Irregular verbs seem to be your difficulty."

"They should have a law making all verbs regular," was the answer. And Dr. John Johnson continued on his rounds with a slight smile on the edges of his lips. For being a SANS had certainly helped a young girl by the name of Teresa Diori.
